How To Use:

      The prototype loads the login page for the user when it is started up and saves the password to confirm the users vote later. It does not have database authentication at this time. The user is taken to the home page upon logging in. From here they can navigate to a general information page, candidate information page, forum, and a voting page. On the candidate information page more information can be seen about each candidate(at this time it displays the same "Ideals" for each candidate). When the user is ready they can start the voting process which, once it's complete, can't be repeated but they can cancel at any point before their vote is locked in.